REGULATIONS FOR THE DEGREE OF JURIS DOCTOR (JD)

These regulations apply to students admitted to the JD curriculum in the academic year 2013-14 and thereafter.

(See also General Regulations)

Eligibility for admission

- LL99. To be eligible for admission to the degree of Juris Doctor, a candidate shall:
- (a) comply with the General Regulations;
 - (b) hold a degree in a non-law subject with at least second class honours or equivalent awarded by a recognised university; or
 - (c) hold a law degree from a non-common law jurisdiction with at least second class honours or equivalent awarded by a recognised university.

Language requirement

LL100. Applicants who do not have a degree awarded by an institution with English as the medium of instruction shall be required to take either IELTS or TOFEL for admission to the programme:

IELTS: a minimum overall band score of 7.5, with no individual score below 6.5 and a minimum band score of 7.0 in the academic writing module.

TOEFL: a minimum score of 600 on the paper-based test (or 250 on the computer-based test or 100 on the internet-based test)

Qualifying Examination

LL101.

- (a) A qualifying examination may be set to test the candidates' formal academic ability or his or her ability to follow the courses of study prescribed. It shall consist of one or more written papers or their equivalent.
 - (b) A candidate who is required to satisfy the examiners in a qualifying examination shall not be permitted to register until he or she has satisfied the examiners in the examination.

Length of curriculum

LL102. The curriculum for the degree of Juris Doctor shall normally be completed in two academic years. The Board of the Faculty of Law can extend the period of study beyond two academic years, but under no circumstances shall the curriculum be extended beyond four academic years.

Completion of the curriculum

LL103. To complete the curriculum a candidate shall:

- (a) comply with the General Regulations;
 - (b) follow instruction and attend classes as required, and complete all coursework requirements; and
 - (c) pass courses totalling at least 144 credits in value, in the manner specified below, unless the candidate has received advanced standing credits pursuant to LL104, in which case the student shall pass courses totalling 132 credits in value.

Advanced Standing

LL104. The Board of the Faculty of Law may grant advanced standing to a candidate for up to 12 credits of courses in recognition of an equivalent course or equivalent courses completed successfully in another degree programme, where such a course is or such courses are completed no more than 5 years prior to the candidate's commencement of the JD programme. Where advanced standing credits are granted, the Board of the Faculty of Law shall specify from which course or courses the candidate is exempted in the curriculum. Advanced standing credits shall not be included in the calculation of the cumulative GPA, but the credits may be recorded on the transcript of the candidate.

Exemption of courses

LL105. The Board of the Faculty of Law may grant exemption to a candidate for up to 12 credits of courses in recognition of an equivalent course or equivalent courses completed successfully in another degree programme, where such a course is or such courses are completed no more than 5 years prior to the candidate's commencement of the JD programme. Where an exemption is granted, the Board of the Faculty of Law shall specify from which course or courses the candidate is exempted in the curriculum, and the candidate shall select a course or courses of an equivalent number of exempted credits.

Selection of courses

LL106. A candidate shall select his or her courses in accordance with the recommended sequence of the curriculum during the course selection period as specified by the University. Such selection shall be subject to approval by the Board of the Faculty of Law. Changes to the selection of courses may be made, with the approval of the Board of the Faculty of Law, during the add/drop period of respective semesters, and such changes shall not be reflected in the transcript of the candidate. Requests for changes after the respective add/drop period shall not normally be considered.

LL 107. Withdrawal from courses beyond the designated add/drop period will not be permitted, except for medical reasons and with the approval of the Board of the Faculty of Law. Withdrawal without permission will result in a fail grade in the relevant course(s).

Dissertation

LL108. A candidate shall submit the title of his or her dissertation no later than April 30 of the final year of study. The dissertation shall be presented for examination by June 30 of the final year of study.

LL109. Under exceptional circumstances a candidate may apply to the Board of the Faculty of Law for an extension of the deadline by which the dissertation must be presented for examination.

LL110. The candidate shall submit a statement certifying that the dissertation represents his or her own work undertaken after registration as a candidate for the degree. The examiners may require an oral examination on the subject of the dissertation.

Assessment

LL111. The courses will be assessed with a wide variety of methods, including (but not exclusively) traditional examinations, research papers, class performance and take-home examinations. A candidate shall pass a course if the Board of Examiners is satisfied by the candidate's performance in the assessment.

Grades

LL112. The grades, their standards and the grade points for assessment shall be as follows:

Grade	Standard	Grade Point
A+		4.3
A	Excellent	4.0
A-		3.7
B+	Good	3.3
B		3.0
B-	Borderline Average	2.7
C+	Satisfactory	2.3
C		2.0
C-	Borderline Satisfactory	1.7
D+		1.3
D	Pass	1.0
F	Fail	0

Failure to pass a course

LL113.

- (a) Any candidate who fails to pass a course or courses in the manner provided for in these Regulations may be permitted or required by the Board of Examiners:
 - (1) to repeat the course or courses by following instruction and taking the prescribed examination (or any relevant assessment), or by taking the prescribed examination (or any relevant assessment) without following instruction when the course is or the courses are next offered; or
 - (2) to undertake the study of any alternative course or courses which will enable the candidate to complete the curriculum.
- (b) Where a candidate is permitted or required to repeat a course or undertake the study of an alternative course under (a), both the new grade and the previous F grade shall be included in the calculation of the cumulative GPA, and both grades shall be recorded on the transcript.
- (c) Where a candidate who has failed to present a satisfactory dissertation, the Board of Examiners may permit the candidate, subject to his or her performance in other examinations, to either revise the dissertation and re-present it, or present a new dissertation, for examination within a specified period determined by the Board of Examiners.
- (d) The maximum number of attempts for a particular course or requirement, including retakes and re-examinations, is three.

- (e) A candidate who is not permitted to present himself or herself for re-examination in any course(s) in which he or she has failed to satisfy the examiners, or is not permitted to present a new dissertation or re-present a submitted dissertation, shall be recommended for discontinuation of studies under General Regulation G 12.
 - (f) A candidate shall not be permitted to repeat a course for which he or she has received a pass grade for the purpose of upgrading.

Overall pass

LL114. Subject to LL104, a candidate who has passed courses totalling 144 credits in value shall be awarded the degree of Juris Doctor.

Absence from an examination

LL115. Any candidate who is absent from an examination in the manner provided for in LL116 and LL117 may be permitted by the Board of Examiners to sit a supplementary examination. Any supplementary examination shall be part of that academic year's examination, and the provisions made in the regulations for failure at the first attempt shall apply accordingly.

LL116. A candidate who becomes aware of his or her inability to sit an examination, on medical or other grounds deemed acceptable by the Board of Examiners, may apply, not later than two weeks of the first day of the candidate's absence from any examination, for permission to sit a supplementary examination at a later time pursuant to LL115.

LL117. Where the Board of Examiners is satisfied that a candidate's failure to obtain permission prior to his or her absence from an examination is justified by extenuating circumstances, the Board of Examiners may waive the requirement to obtain prior permission under LL115 and grant the candidate permission to sit a supplementary examination at a later date pursuant to LL114.

Award of Degrees

LL118.

- (a) The degree of Juris Doctor shall be awarded in five divisions:

- First Class Honours
- Second Class Honours Division One
- Second Class Honours Division Two
- Third Class Honours
- Pass

- (b) The classification of honours shall be determined by the Board of Examiners for the degree in accordance with the following Cumulative GPA scores, with all courses taken (including failed courses) carrying equal weighting:

Class of honours	CGPA range
First Class Honours	3.60 – 4.30
Second Class Honours	(2.40 – 3.59)
Division One	3.00 – 3.59
Division Two	2.40 – 2.99
Third Class Honours	1.70 – 2.39
Pass	1.00 – 1.69

- (c) In exceptional cases honours classification may not be determined solely on the basis of a candidate's Cumulative GPA and the Board of Examiners for the degree may, at its absolute discretion and with justification, award a higher class of honours to a candidate deemed to have demonstrated meritorious academic achievement but whose Cumulative GPA falls below the range stipulated in (b) above of the higher classification by not more than 0.1 Grade Point.
- (d) A pass list of successful candidates shall be posted on Faculty notice boards and the student homepage.

COURSE DESCRIPTIONS

The courses available to students are listed below. Where two courses are described as “I and II” (12 credits), this means that they may either be taught separately in two semesters in the same academic year or be taught as one combined course in one semester, and may either be examined separately or at the same time.

Compulsory Courses:

JDOC1001 and JDOC1002 Law of contract I and II (12 credits)

Contract is a compulsory subject in the JD degree. A sound knowledge of the principles of the law of contract is an essential element of any legal education. The principles of contract law govern many important areas of daily life and of the national and international economy. They also constitute an essential building block for other branches of the law, especially commercial law.

This course is concerned with the principles relating to the law of contract generally, rather than to the rules dealing with contracts of a particular subject matter, such as those applicable to the sale of goods (whether domestic or international), to insurance contracts, to land contracts, to agency or to contracts of employment. The law applicable to these contracts is studied in other subjects, some of which (like sale of goods and agency in commercial law) are also compulsory. The study of contracts in specified contexts assumes knowledge of the general principles that we study in this course.

Along with tort and unjust enrichment (also known as restitution), the law of contract forms part of the law of obligations, the part of law that identifies the situations in which one person becomes liable in private law to another person. That liability is, generally, to pay damages. Unlike tort and unjust enrichment (where liability is commonly said to arise simply by operation of law), the liability that arises in contract originates in the parties’ consent, which generally finds expression in an agreement between the parties. The consensual nature of the contractual obligation has a determining effect on the nature of the obligation between the parties and on the remedies that arise for its breach. It also stresses the need for care in the drafting of contracts.

In origin, the law of contract is the creation of the common law courts. Throughout its long historical development, the law of contract has been influenced by commercial practice, both national and international, and by the rules of other systems of law. This continues in today’s globalised world, and not only in common law systems of law. A telling example is the adoption, in recent Chinese codifications of contract law, of principles developed either in other systems of law or in international legal instruments.

While the law of contract in Hong Kong (as in most countries that have adopted the common law) remains uncodified, statute now plays an important role in the development of contract law – for example, in protecting consumers. This course focuses on the most important principles and rules of contract law, as found in case law, statute and international legal instruments.

Assessment:

Semester 1: Mid semester examination: 50%; Written assignment: 50%

Semester 2: Mid semester assignment: 50%; Final examination: 50%

JDOC1003 and JDOC1004

Criminal law I and II (12 credits)

Criminal Law I introduces students to the principles of Hong Kong criminal law and liability. Topics include the nature and classification of crime, elements of criminal procedure in Hong Kong, the burden of proof and the impact of constitutional human rights, and the general principles of criminal responsibility, including criminal defences and degrees of participation. Offences considered will include homicide and theft.

Criminal Law II examines further aspects of criminal law and liability in Hong Kong, including additional criminal defences and inchoate liability. It will examine the application of the general principles of criminal responsibility in selected criminal offence areas, including homicide, assaults, sexual offences, and theft and deception. Where possible, students will be encouraged to consider alternative approaches to the principles of liability, and to develop social policy analysis skills.

Assessment:

Semester 1: 30% mid-term exam; 10% magistrate's court report

Semester 2: 10% group presentation; 50% final examination

JDOC1005 and JDOC1006

Law of tort I and II (12 credits)

Tort is one of the first subjects undertaken in the JD degree. Along with contract and unjust enrichment (also referred to as restitution), it forms part of the law of obligations, which covers the situations in which one person may be liable to another person in private (or civil) law. In tort, that liability is, generally, to pay damages as compensation for a 'wrong'. The law of tort defines the circumstances in which an individual incurs responsibility for conduct that the law classifies as 'wrongful'. In this sense, tort may be regarded as the private law equivalent of criminal law, which is, however, generally enforced against individuals by the State, rather than by another individual.

Private law extends beyond the law of obligations to include the law of property and the law of succession. Historically, it may have included much more than this (for example, it could be regarded as having included family law). A common aspect of the development of private law is that, in origin it was the creation of the common law courts, and therefore found, primarily, in case law.

Case law remains an important source of tort law, but, as with most other areas of law today, statute law now overshadows much of it, and this is likely to increase further in the future. A study of tort law is still, however, an excellent vehicle for the study of common law method. Students who study this course will, therefore, be required to read closely a number of cases and statutes for every seminar.

While the formal legal sources of tort law are easy to identify, the policies underlying the law, which focus on the role that tort plays in society, are extremely controversial. An understanding of these controversies is essential for a thorough knowledge of tort law and of the way in which it is developing globally in the twenty-first century.

Assessment:

Semester 1: 50% examination, 50% written assignment

Semester 2: 50% examination, 50% written assignment

JDOC1007 Legal research and methods (6 credits)

Case reading: distinguishing law/fact; learning the structure and language of common law judgments; identifying relevant facts; identifying and defining legal issues, ratios, arguments, reasoning with precision; learning the ways in which judges in one case treat the judgments in earlier cases; precedent in action.

Basic legal writing skills using short weekly marked up and graded writing assignments in the format of case briefs, letters to clients, closed internal memoranda. Emphasis will be placed upon correct use of general English and appropriate legal terminology, clarity of expression and logical, effective organisation of ideas and arguments.

Learning skills: pre-class preparation; in class exercises, participation in class discussions using group and Socratic methods.

Assessment: 100% coursework

JDOC1008 The legal system of the Hong Kong SAR (6 credits)

Despite all the shortcomings of colonialism, a major legacy of British colonialism is the common law system; which has been transplanted in almost every British colony. Hong Kong is no exception. She inherited the common law system from the British in the heydays of the British Empire, and more than 150 years later, this common law system is preserved upon the resumption of Chinese sovereignty over Hong Kong under the unprecedented experiment of 'One Country, Two Systems', which is enshrined in our Basic Law. Why is it so important to preserve the common law system? What are its central features? In what ways is it 'common' to the 'common law heritage'? How is it different from the legal system on the Mainland? How and to what extent do the two legal systems interact?

The aim of the Legal system course is to provide students with an understanding of the HKSAR's legal system, its common law foundations and its interface with the PRC legal system within the One-Country-Two-Systems framework outlined in Basic Law. We will be looking at the common law process and the role of personnel who help put the law into motion. We will examine the impact and performance of Hong Kong's legal system through the study of a range of current issues, for e.g., whether the One-Country-Two-Systems experiment has been successful or whether the common law system can indeed function with Chinese characteristics; whether the law is a panacea for all social problems or are there difficult questions which lie beyond the capacities of courts, etc.

A legal system does not exist in isolation. It can only be properly understood in its historical, social, economic and political context. It is therefore important to be able to understand the inter-relationship between different priorities that exist in any modern society. If you go through the newspapers, you will note the large number of controversial issues that constantly draw attention to the fundamental values underpinning our legal system. What do we, as a community, stand for? Does the law reflect those values or is it merely responsive to the circumstances as and when they arise? For instance, it is easy to advocate for equal access to justice, but who should pay for the system? Few would disagree with the primacy of human rights but how do we prioritise different rights when they are seemingly in conflict with other equally important values?

The course seeks to approach questions about the legal system from the broader perspective of the political and social implications of particular legal frameworks. This enables a critical understanding of why the legal system is the way it is, whether it achieves the objectives that society considers important and whether it serves to protect society's fundamental values. How does it protect these values in a continually changing social order? If a system is to gain the trust of its constituents, it needs to be sturdy and its principles should be strong enough to stand the test of time, yet it should not be so inflexible as to yield injustice. How can a system be designed so as to ensure that the needs and rights of all constituents are provided for, including minorities? How should the law and the legal system strike a balance between conflicting values? These are some of the types of questions we will be considering during the course.

Students will be encouraged to read as widely on the topics covered as students feel appropriate, to reflect on the topics, and to engage in debate among themselves and in class on the topics.

Assessment: Two take-home assignments (each weighted 50%)

JDOC1009 Constitutional law (6 credits)

Constitutional law is a core component of a legal system. It also constitutes the foundation of a legal system, because it stipulates what are the sources of law in the legal system and how the law is made; it establishes, empowers and constrains the legislative, executive and judicial branches of government; and it regulates the relationship between these organs of government as well as the relationship between the government and the people. From the perspective of the people, constitutional law guarantees and protects their human rights and fundamental freedoms.

In Hong Kong, constitutional law also performs the important function of regulating the relationship between Hong Kong as a Special Administrative Region of the People's Republic of China (PRC) and the Central Government Authorities of the PRC. Constitutional law in Hong Kong is therefore the legal foundation of 'One Country, Two Systems'. It is also an area of the law which is often the focus of public and media attention. Constitutional law cases and controversies often appear in the Hong Kong press as frontpage news stories. The outcomes of constitutional litigation sometimes not only change the lives of the parties to the case, but also have wide and deep impact on the Hong Kong community and its public and social policies, or the political relationship between Hong Kong and mainland China.

Constitutional law is closely related to politics, political philosophy and history, which some of you may have encountered in your previous studies. Some constitutional controversies in Hong Kong are covered in our course on Hong Kong's legal system. We hope that this course on constitutional law will provide for you the opportunity to study the subject more systematically and intensively. However, as it is only a one-semester course, it can do no more than opening the door for you, so that those of you who are interested in a broader and deeper understanding of the subject may acquire a solid foundation for your future studies in this interesting, exciting and challenging domain of public law.

Chinese Law Elective:

JDOC6008 Introduction to Chinese law and legal system (6 credits)

The objective of this course is to introduce students to the study of Chinese law as a developing legal system. Law as contemporary lawyers understand it didn't emerge spontaneously in traditional Chinese society. It has developed in China as part of the modernization project since the second half of 19th century. Since 1978, in order to initiate and carry out economic reforms, within a short period of time the Chinese Party-State has generated an extraordinary outpouring of laws. However, China has not been widely recognised as a "rule of law" society until now, due to the lack of some key institutional values that are "essential" to such a society. This seminar shall examine the traditional Chinese ways of governing before China encountered modernity, the structure and roles of contemporary Chinese legal institutions, constitutional law, administrative law, criminal justice and civil procedure from historical and comparative perspectives.
